Recommended Reading

Carter Niemeyer

In this memoir, he reveals the wild ride that turned a trapper into a champion for wolves.

Nate Blakeslee

This recently released title tells the story of legendary Yellowstone wolf O-Six who was killed just outside the park's boundaries.

Brenda Peterson

The story of the life, death, and return of wild American wolves. It is a book of our own history seen through our relationship with wolves.

Carter Niemeyer – integral in the reintroduction of wolves to Yellowstone and author of Wolfer and Wolf Land. Carter will spend an evening of storytelling about his Yellowstone experiences as well as a presentation on wildlife “management” services.

Nate Blakeslee – author of the recently released American Wolf will be giving a talk and book signing. The book tells the story of legendary wolf O-Six who was killed when she crossed the Yellowstone boundary.

Amaroq Weiss – West Coast Wolf Advocate, Center for Biological Diversity, handles wolf issues in CA, OR and WA as well as the northern Rockies and on the federal front. She has worked in wolf conservation for more than 20 years and was a stakeholder representative in the two separate state processes to draft wolf conservation and management plans in OR and CA.

Rachel Tilseth – wolf advocate, blogger and creator of Wolves of Douglas County Wisconsin to talk about wolves, wolf hounding and other issues.

Marc Cooke – Executive Director, Wolves of the Rockies. Back for a second year and ready to create an initiative for a forgiveness zone around certain areas of Yellowstone to protect the wolves.

KC York – President, Trap Free Montana is working to end the horrific practice of trapping and education is key.

Michael Robinson – from the Center for Biological Diversity, will talk about the Mexican Gray Wolf and how you can help save this species (approximately 113 in total) in peril right here in our own state of Arizona.

Co-existence Panel & Workshop – a collective of wolf advocates, ranchers and others including Joe Englehart, Carol Bogezi and Amaroq Weiss to continue to evolve the conversation around non-lethal, Predator Friendly® methods and how to live in co-existence with wolves and other predators.

Film Festival – more films over two days at Mary D Fisher Theatre thanks to Sedona International Film Festival.

Wolf Aid – a concert of multiple performers and musicians from local favorites to headliners.

And so much more including school presentations, Predator Friendly® Fundraiser and wolf socials.

AND MORE | PLAN B PROJECTS FOR 2018

And there's more ...

In addition to the collaborative efforts and Sedona Wolf Week 2018, Plan B is also working on:

Wolves of Douglas County Wisconsin – develop and produce a short documentary on wolf-hounding in Wisconsin, the only state that allows such a barbaric practice that kills hundreds of dogs, wolves, bears and other wildlife annually.

I AM Wolf Nation – a virtual collective of voices in support of wolves (primarily) and all wildlife (secondarily), targeted to launch Spring 2018.

Ongoing Support to wolf and wolf dog organizations in their efforts to educate, advocate and rescue wolves and wolf dogs.

Legislation & Advocacy – Plan B believes issues related to wolves need to be tackled on two fronts:

1. Educating people (constituents/voters) AND
2. Representing wolves on a political level.

Plans include creating a 501c4 for advocacy and political efforts, exploring the retention of lobbyists and creation of a Political Action Committee in support of wolves and other predators.

Sedona Wolf Week 2019 and beyond – it has always been the objective of Plan B and Apex for Sedona Wolf Week to expand to other cities. The expansion provides a greater reach for education and awareness of how essential wolves are to our future.

Chaos & Theory - we are working with artist, Karen Kliethermes from Sedona Wolf Week 2017 to publish a childrens' book telling the story of Chaos & Theory to educate youth on the importance of wolves.

WE NEED YOU in order to do this very important work.

When we save wolves, we save ourselves.

4 Amazing Organizations with a Passion for Wolves Join Forces

Plan B to Save Wolves along with Apex Protection Project, Wolves of the Rockies and Trap Free Montana traveled to Yellowstone to see the wolves in their natural habitat. The scenery was breathtaking and seeing wolves in the wild for the first time brought tears to our eyes, especially when they howled as a pack. In addition to spending time in the park, we met with Yellowstone's top wolf biologist Doug Smith and Rick McIntyre. The four organizations held a strategy session to discuss key initiatives for the coming year including:

Assist in the effort for the reintroduction of wolves to Colorado

Collaborate to reduce the hunting season and quota of wolves in Montana

An aggressive campaign for a forgiveness zone around certain areas of Yellowstone to protect the wolves from hunting and trapping.

Assist in efforts to require 24 hour trap check intervals in Montana

Design an app that can track trap kills, with GPS location and date stamping to ensure trapping compliance

Trail cams to observe any illegal actions and GPS trackers on the trail cams

Targeted campaign to the fashion industry to stop using fur, thus reducing the need for trapping
